Many of us have been thinking about one of the most significant events in Texas Methodist history—the creation of the United Methodist Church in 1968. Perhaps some of you reading this Newsletter were in Dallas on April 23, 1968 and heard Bishop Rueben Mueller (EUB) and Bishop Lloyd Wicke (MC) declare “Lord of the Church, we are united in Thee, in Thy Church and now in The United Methodist Church.” That the uniting occurred in Dallas was not without controversy. Since the creation of the Methodist Church in 1939, General Conference locations were rotated among the jurisdictions. The 1964 General Conference was in Pittsburgh and one of the last items on its agenda was receiving the report of the committee to determine the site of the 1968 General Conference. It was the turn of the South Central Jurisdiction, and the recommendation was Dallas.

In April 1964 Dallas was still in the international spotlight because of the Kennedy assassination just six months earlier. There were many media reports of Dallas school children cheering the news, and later news stories reported on the climate of hate and bigotry in Dallas.

In 1964 Dallas was infamous for the strain of radical anti-integration rhetoric of Edwin Walker, H. L. Hunt, and W. A. Criswell, all of whom combined Christianity, anti-Communism, and segregation in sermons, tracts and Life Line radio programs. We knew about the bomb threat against Dr. Martin Luther King’s 1963 Dallas appearance and the protests against Ambassador Adlai Stevenson which resulted in his being struck with a sign. Delegates in Pittsburgh knew about all this when they were asked to vote for Dallas at the 1968 General Conference site. Central Jurisdiction delegates to Pittsburgh voted against going to Dallas in 1968 where they knew they would be subjected to the humiliation of Jim Crow hotels, restaurants, public transportation, and a climate of hostility.

Less well known were the efforts of Mayor Earle Cabell, Juanita Craft, Bob Cullum, and Stanley Marcus (among others) who were working (often behind the scenes) for peaceful integration.

We Christians believe in Providence, and God was working through people and institutions to achieve greater racial justice in the years between 1964 and 1968. The Public Accommodations Act of 1964 was only one of several civil rights measures passed in the period. Thanks to federal legislation, delegates could stay in hotels of their choice. The segregationist tone of the Dallas Morning News was muted. Cabell moved from City Hall to Congress, replacing an avowed segregationist. DISD continued its painfully slow path to compliance to desegregation orders.

As we celebrate the 50th anniversary of the creation of the United Methodist Church, let us renew our commitment to elimination of all forms of discrimination against all of God’s children.
This year's annual meeting will be held at the Trinity-First UMC, located at 801 N Mesa St, El Paso, TX. This year’s theme of Methodism on The Border encompasses a rich history of ministry in the border states of both the US and Mexico. Our time will be highlighted by the address of both Bishop Martinez and Bishop Bledsoe speaking on the past history, current issues, and present ministry along the border during our banquet on Thursday evening, AND THEN a celebration of the history and ongoing work of Lydia Patterson during a banquet to be held at Lydia Patterson on Friday.

History of Methodist Church at Washington on the Brazos Published

One of the earliest Methodist churches in Texas, and one of the very few brick churches built before the Civil War was the church at Washington on the Brazos. The town occupied a strategic river crossing and enjoyed an era of prosperity during the steamboat era, but when the railroad construction created alternatives to riverboats, the town died, and so did the church.

The brick church was erected in honor of Martin Ruter who died in Washington in 1838.

Tom Stevens has written a history of the church based on deed records, quarterly conference minutes, memoirs, and newspaper accounts. Contact me for ordering information.

Historic Church Pictures

Each issue contains the picture of some historic church and asks readers to identify it. Here is the picture from the Fall 2017 issue

This magnificent old stone church is Lee Tabernacle UMC in Navasota. It was founded in 1860, and members shared facilities with the Baptists. In 1866 the congregations were able to build a structure in what was called the “Freedmen’s Town” section of Navasota. Methodists organized separately in 1876 and were able to build this building in 1896. They worshiped in the basement while the walls of the building were being constructed.

There have been several changes to the building, including the addition of a choir room, but the exterior has remained true to the 1896 original design. The stained glass windows have been restored.

The pastor during construction was the Rev. Edward Lee. The church changed its name to honor him.

The members of this church hosted several sessions of Annual Conference. While Bishop Mallalieu was presiding at the Texas Conference of the MEC in this church that plans were put in place to move Martin Ruter’s remains from the abandoned cemetery in Washington to Navasota.

Here is the next historic church for you to identify.
