EDITORIAL BOARD

Christopher J. Anderson, Yale Divinity School Library
Morris Davis, Drew University
Sharon Grant, Hood Theological Seminary
A. V. Huff, Furman University
Russell Richey, Duke Divinity School
James M. Shopshire, Sr., Wesley Theological Seminary Emeritus
Ian Straker, Howard University
Douglas Strong, Seattle Pacific University
Robert J. Williams, Retired GCAH General Secretary
Anne Streaty Wimberly, Interdenominational Theological Center
Charles Yrigoyen, Jr., Wesley Theological Seminary

Assistant Editors
Michelle Merkel-Brunskill
Christopher Rodkey
Nancy E. Topolewski

Book Review Editor
Jane Donovan

Cover: Ruth G. Carter was a social worker and powerful lay leader of Methodist women’s groups during her long life. See article by Ellen Blue (pp.211-221). Image was cropped from a photo from the Women’s Division Records of the General Board of Global Ministries collection located at the General Commission on Archives and History, United Methodist Archives in Madison, New Jersey.
CONTENTS

Contributors .......................................................... 194
Editor’s Note ......................................................... 195

“The Noblest Ideals of Service”: Sister Jeanie Banks’s Sojourn in London’s East End, 1888-1893
   by Christopher H. Evans ........................................ 197

The Ruth Carter Auxiliary: Women’s Support for Peoples
Community Center in New Orleans
   by Ellen Blue ...................................................... 211

Jacob Albright: An Evangelical Conversion and an Evangelical Ministry
   by Mark Draper ................................................... 222

“Love Divine, All Loves Excelling”: Some Theological Reflections
   on the Witness of a Hymn
   by Schubert M. Ogden ......................................... 235

Book Review .......................................................... 242

Methodist History Volume LVI: Contributors and Articles .......... 244
Methodist History Volume LVI: General Index ......................... 246

Copyright 2018, General Commission on Archives and History,
The United Methodist Church

Methodist History is included in Religious and Theological Abstracts,
Historical Abstracts and America: History and Life
ATLA Religion Database

Manuscripts submitted for publication and all other correspondence should be addressed to Editor: METHODIST HISTORY, P.O. Box 127, Madison, NJ 07940. Prospective authors are advised to write for guidelines or visit www.gcah.org.
ELLEN BLUE is the Mouzon Biggs, Jr., Professor of the History of Christianity & United Methodist Studies at Phillips Theological Seminary in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Dr. Blue’s newest book is In Case of Katrina: Reinventing Church in Post-Katrina New Orleans. She is the author of St. Mark’s and the Social Gospel: Methodist Women and Civil Rights in New Orleans, 1895-1965, and co-author with Charles M. Wood of Attentive to God: Thinking Theologically in Ministry. She is finishing a history of United Methodist Women and its predecessors to be published in 2018 in conjunction with the organization’s 150th anniversary. An elder in the Louisiana conference, she holds the Ph.D. from Tulane University and the M.Div. from Southern Methodist University.

MARK DRAPER is the Associate Dean of Bible, Theology and Ministry, an Assistant Professor of Historical Theology, and Executive Director of The Pense Learning Center at Evangelical Theological Seminary, Myerstown, Pennsylvania. He holds a doctorate in Historical Theology from Trinity Evangelical Divinity School where he served as a Jonathan Edwards Fellow. He also served as the Assistant Director of the Niebuhr Center for Faith and Action and adjunct professor in history and religion at Elmhurst College and as a library supervisor for The Free Library of Philadelphia. His Monotheism as Motivation for Service and Social Justice was published by the Niebuhr Center and his article on the Abolition appeared in The Encyclopedia of American Christianity.

CHRISTOPHER H. EVANS is Professor of the History of Christianity and Methodist Studies at Boston University School of Theology. His is the author of several books and articles on the history of Christianity, Methodist Studies, and American religion. His most recent book is The Social Gospel in American Religion, a History (New York UP, 2017). The research for this article was compiled while he was a John Rylands Research Institute/Manchester Wesley Research Centre Visiting Fellow in the summer of 2017.

SCHUBERT M. OGDEN is University Distinguished Professor of Theology Emeritus at Perkins School of Theology, Southern Methodist University. In addition to numerous articles and reviews, he is the author of The Reality of God and Other Essays and The Point of Christology. And he also selected, edited, and translated New Testament and Mythology and Other Basic Writings by Rudolf Bultmann. His more recent books include The Understanding of Christian Faith, To Teach the Truth: Selected Courses and Seminars, and To Preach the Truth: Selected Sermons and Homilies. His Notebooks are available on the Special Collections website of the Drew University Library: http://bit.ly/OgdenNotebooks.
2018 is the 50th anniversary of the formation of The United Methodist Church. What puts the “united” in the Methodist name is more than a merger of formerly independent denominational bodies—it signifies the joining of two dynamic aspects of Christian life—personal piety and social holiness. One ignites the other. Individual religious piety sparks a response. It is first experienced and then evidenced, relationally and missionally, reaching towards people and communities in need. The July issue of Methodist History explores this critical strand of denominational DNA.

Christopher Evans’s essay about Sister Jeanie Banks and her significant role in the deaconess movement in The Wesleyan Methodist Church is an illuminating case in point. Examining the diary of the most prominent deaconess of her day, this “Lady Worker” in a Methodist Mission in East London (1880-1890) embodies the type of servant ministry that characterizes British and North American Methodism. Her daily log uncovers the ministries of Methodist sisterhoods, demonstrating how these women blended personal and social holiness, a dynamic combination which made them an institutional force.

Ellen Blue’s essay about the Ruth Carter Auxiliary supporting the work at Peoples Community Center offers a more American example of Methodism’s no-holiness-but-social-holiness maxim, this one with a southern accent. The Carter Auxiliary in New Orleans’s Central City—and the story of the exemplary Methodist woman for whom it is named—stands among many unsung examples of an activist faith nurtured and stemming from a strong Methodist home, congregation, and organized association of Church and community women.

Mark Draper’s essay about Jacob Albright’s (1759-1808) conversion experience is a special gift in United Methodism’s 50th anniversary year. Albright is the seminal figure in the Evangelische Gemeinschaft, later Church that merged with the Church of the United Brethren (1946) and again with the Methodist Church (1968) to form today’s United Methodist Church. Albright’s conversion and ensuing call to ministry follow many of the same patterns of his Methodist contemporaries who were transformed from empty religious rote via personal experience in and of God’s love, responding then with a life of selfless, sacrificial service to others. Draper observes in Albright an evangelical paradigm: inward religious experience as more than an end in itself but motivation to outreaching ministry.

Schubert Ogden’s essay gets at the well-spring of the Methodist motivation and the movement’s historic witness expressed in the words of a hymn, namely, “Love Divine, All Loves Excelling.” Hymns are Methodists’ theological tomes. Reflecting on Charles Wesley’s 1747 hymn named above, Ogden points to the Wesleyan core belief about the transformational power of God’s love grounding humanity in unbounded grace. Experiencing this love breaks the hold on human brokenness, offers unconditional acceptance and opens a new future, one where inward faith works through love towards justice and peace for all of God’s creation. Special thanks to good friend Dr. Andrew Scrimgeour for bringing Ogden’s work to our attention and adapting it for this publication.

Good reading!

Alfred T. Day III