CONTRIBUTORS

DONALD CARL MALONE, a member of the Rocky Mountain Conference, United Methodist Church and pastor of Grace Church, Cheyenne, Wyoming, received the B.A. from the University of Colorado and the M.Th. from the School of Theology at Claremont. Mr. Malone contributed an earlier article to this magazine, published in July 1971.

ORVILLE S. WALTERS, Ph.D., M.D., is Clinical Professor of Psychiatry in the University of Illinois at Peoria, and Research Professor Emeritus at Urbana. He teaches and practices psychiatry in the Family Practice training program in Methodist Hospital of Central Illinois. An earlier paper on Wesley was published in Methodist History, April 1972.

LEON O. HYNSON, Ph.D., is Chairman of the Division of Philosophy and Religion at Spring Arbor College in Michigan. He received the Ph.D. from the University of Iowa in 1971. His dissertation was entitled "Church and State in the Thought and Life of John Wesley."

FREDERICK V. MILLS, SR., head of the Department of History at LaGrange College, received the Ph.D. in history from the University of Pennsylvania. He has just been named a visiting fellow for special study at Princeton Theological Seminary for the 1973-74 academic year.

LUCIA GIDDENS MYERS, a member of College Heights United Methodist Church, Lakeland, Florida, was a reporter for The Birmingham Post when the final General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South met in Birmingham, Alabama, in 1938. She now does creative writing for religious publications.

COVER

"Old Church," Oxford, Georgia, is one of a cluster of sites in the town which was designated as the 16th Historic Shrine of The United Methodist Church by the General Conference in 1972. The central section of the church was built in 1841, with the two wings being added in 1878. More than any other building, this church represents the ties between Oxford, Emory and Methodism. Here, on Thanksgiving Day in 1880, Dr. Atticus G. Haygood delivered his famous sermon, "The New South."
