CONTRIBUTORS

DAVID B. SOKOL is a recent graduate of Yale College. This paper is excerpted from his senior essay which explores the dialogue between American Methodist conversion experience and the racial attitudes of its people. His most recent academic article appears in The Long Island Historical Journal. He pursues a career in journalism.

PEDER BORGEN is Professor emeritus at the University of Trondheim, Norway. He is a graduate of Drew University (Ph.D.) and Oslo University (Dr. Theol.). The author of several books and many articles, he has served as President of Studiorum Novi Testamenti Societas and The Royal Norwegian Society of Sciences and Letters, and currently serves as one of the Vice Presidents of the World Methodist Historical Society.

JOHN G. McELLHENNEY is a retired clergy member of the Eastern Pennsylvania Annual Conference of The United Methodist Church. He currently teaches United Methodist studies at Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Philadelphia. He is author or editor of several books and articles on Methodist history including United Methodism in America: A Compact History and 200 Years of United Methodism: An Illustrated History.

SAMUEL J. ROGAL before his retirement was Chair of the Division of Humanities and Fine Arts at Illinois Valley Community College, La Salle, Illinois. He has written extensively on the Wesleys and Methodist history. Among his work is A Biographical Dictionary of 18th Century Methodism (Edwin Mellen Press), a ten-volume reference work. Several of his articles have appeared in Methodist History.

MARK E. HANSHAW holds degrees in journalism and law from the University of Tennessee and the University of Manchester, UK (LL.M.). He is completing his M.T.S. at Brite Divinity School and is a local pastor in the Central Texas Annual Conference of The United Methodist Church. He is expecting to enroll in a doctoral program this year.
