CONTRIBUTORS

LEWIS M. PURIFOY, a native of Florida, received the B.A. degree from Maryville College, the M.A. degree from the University of Tennessee, and the Ph.D. degree from the University of North Carolina. Dr. Purifoy has been a member of the faculty of Athens College, University of Tennessee, and University of West Virginia. For the past ten years he has been Professor of History at Emory and Henry College.

EDWARD D. JERVEY received the A.B. degree from Emory University and the Ph.D. degree from Boston University. He has served on the faculty of Lambuth College, Union University, Memphis State University, and is presently Professor of History at Radford College. Dr. Jervev is the author of The History of Methodism in Southern California and Arizona, as well as numerous articles.

WILLIAM C. JASON, JR., attended Genesee Wesley Seminary 1916-1918. His father was graduated from that school in 1885. His great-grandfather, Charles Wing, was an accepted Methodist preacher in Cambridge, Maryland, before the Civil War. Wing entered the Delaware Conference in 1865 and served until his death in 1887. Mr. Jason's grandfather was a local Methodist preacher, beginning in 1874. His father was a member of the Delaware Conference for 52 years, serving 27 of those years, 1891-1918, as president of Delaware State College. A labor union organizer by vocation, Mr. Jason says that through the years he himself has served "an assortment of conference, district, and local church assignments." He was a member of the lay delegation of the Delaware Conference to the 1964 General Conference at Pittsburgh.

NORMAN L. TROTT, President of Wesley Theological Seminary, Washington, D. C., delivered the address, "Traveling Preacher: Heritage and Hope," at the George Arnold Homesite near Fredericksburg, Virginia, on the 150th anniversary of the death of Francis Asbury, on April 3, 1966.
