CONTRIBUTORS

RUSSELL E. RICHEY is Associate Dean for Academic Programs and Research Professor of Church History at the Divinity School, Duke University. He is the author or editor of a number of books and articles on American religious history and the history of Methodism. This article is based upon a paper he presented at the North American Section of the World Methodist Historical Society which met in Toronto in the summer of 1989.

CHARLES YRIGOYEN, JR. is General Secretary of the General Commission on Archives and History of The United Methodist Church and Editor of Methodist History. This article is based on a paper he read at the 19th Century Section of the 1987 Oxford Institute of Methodist Theological Studies which met at Somerville College, Oxford, England.

NANCY A. HARDESTY is a writer, editor and historian currently living in Greenville, SC. She has taught American church history at Emory University. Among her most important historical writings is Women Called To Witness: Evangelical Feminism in the 19th Century (Abingdon, 1984). Dr. Hardesty is also a popular lecturer at academic and church gatherings.

FREDERICK A. NORWOOD is Professor Emeritus of Christianity at Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary. He is widely recognized as a church historian and, especially, as an historian of United Methodism. His book, The Story of American Methodism (Abingdon, 1974) remains the classic history of United Methodism still in print.
